FAA EXTENDS REMOTE ID ENFORCEMENT DATE SIX MONTHS

The FAA has announced they are extending the Remote ID enforcement date by six months. Radio Controlled Operators now have until March 16, 2024, before they will have to comply with the rule. This extension provides the FAA more time to approve FRIA applications and manufacturers the time for production of broadcast modules.

GETTING CLOSE TO THE END OF THE SEASON

The porta-potty will be getting closed down for the season sometime the week of 10/23. Weather station and charging system will also be taken down sometime later this month.

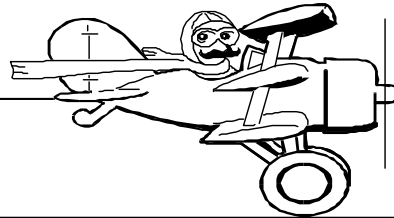

LOST IT (A TIP FROM BRIAN MAU)

Fellow Fliers. For me losing a component can be one of the most frustrating experiences at our field. It means going home. If you're working on a flight bench and drop a battery, you can just pick it up. However, if you happen to drop a bolt, washer or screw you might have a hard time finding it. I hate it when that happens. My solution is to take a condiment cup from any fast-food restaurant and hot glue a magnet to the bottom. All little components can fit in the cup and the magnet will hold them securely. I keep the cup in my RC tool kit and take it to the flight bench whenever I must make an adjustment or replace a component.
